INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC CONFERENCE

Sports, Education, Culture - Interdisciplinary Approaches in Scientific Research

SEC-IASR 2013

Dunarea de Jos University of Galati, Romania

The conference has brought together academics, teachers, guidance personnel, counselors, graduate and undergraduate students with government and non-government organizations to share and discuss both theoretical and practical knowledge about interdisciplinary approaches in scientific research from sports, education and culture. In this context, the conference focused on topics from the social and behavioral sciences: the physical education and sports, performance in sports, kinetotherapy, health education, sports management and marketing, counseling and guidance in the scientific environment, educational trends and globalization, educational policies, culture and education, knowledge society, multi-cultural education, ethical and philosophical approaches. The interdisciplinary character of the conference has been mirrored in multiple perspectives and various specializations and experience of the participants. Its themes and manner of approach have given the debates a character of critical exploration and innovation through its scientific quality and impact of the new tendencies in the fields. The intended objectives has been the following:

- knowledge and identification of good models and practices in the fields of sports, education and culture;
- identification of new trends, different perspectives, strong points and aspects susceptible of optimization;
- development of the theoretical and practical models by identifying the possibility to make them more flexible and adapt them to the requirements of quality in scientific research;
- creating the opportunity for the initiation and development of research projects in partnerships and promoting the scientific collaboration of researchers from various countries with various professional experience.

The conference has brought together specialists in physical education, sport, education and culture from Romania and abroad. They have shared with us their research on performance, sports nutrition, health education, kinetotherapy, leisure, sports management and marketing, sports legislation, performance assessment, individual and institutional performances, counselling and guidance in human performance, and professional development.

The cultural section has included presentation of papers coping with intercultural issues and their literary extensions in the post-communist works. Issues such as exile / post-exile, transcultural migrant literature, autobiographical mechanisms marking the Memoir writings, the conflictive relation (post)totalitarian East - West have been the most discussed topics in the cultural section of our interdisciplinary conference.
